Franchise Matter As Seen By The People

ONE-MINUTE INTERVIEWS WITH REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF ANDERSON

EXPRESSIONS FROM FRIENDS AND FOES

Of the Franchise-Contract Between City and Southern Public Utilities Company.

The Intelligencer presents this morning concise interviews with a number of representative citizens relative to the franchise-contract entered into between the previous city council and the Southern Public Utilities Company.

In calling upon these gentlemen no effort was made to interview any man because of his former allegiance to the franchise or his opposition to it. The Intelligencer desired to sound the sentiment of the representative business and professional men of the city, to determine whether or not they favor a repudiation of the contract entered into between the previous city council and the Southern Public Utilities Company.

It was impossible to get in touch with every prominent business and professional man in the city, but efforts were made to get an expression from some one man representative of each line of business or profession in Anderson. Efforts were made to get an expression from some one representing the merchants, the bankers, the lawyers, the real estate men, the mechanics, the clergymen, etc.

Some 30-odd men were approached during the day and a majority of them had something to say, though a few, for one reason or another, did not care to have their names used in connection with the statement which they gave out. This request has been carefully guarded.

The Intelligencer has withheld no statement, publishing alike that which was said against the question with that which was said in favor of it. More of this will be done in the future, as The Intelligencer desires to sound thoroughly the sentiment of the rank and file of the people on this momentous question.

Statements obtained yesterday are as follows:
A. S. Farmer: "I think the franchise-contract entered into between the city of Anderson and the Southern Public Utilities Company was a mighty good trade for the city. But whether it is good or bad, I think we ought to stick to our bargain."

R. S. Ligon: "A trade is a trade, whether it be good or bad. I think the city council of Anderson should stick to the trade which has been made with the Southern Public Utilities Company."
C. Frank Bolt: "I think the franchise-contract which the city of Anderson has with the Southern Public Utilities Company is a good one. I am perfectly satisfied with it myself, as I am getting my lights cheaper than ever before. I will also say that I believe the people at large are satisfied with the contract and are sick of the fight now being made over the question."

Lee G. Holmman: "I think everybody knows how I stand on the franchise question. I don't care to make a statement concerning the matter at this time."
Rev. O. L. Martin: "As to the equity of the franchise entered into between the city of Anderson and the Southern Public Utilities, I know nothing. I want only what is fair for the city and fair for the company. I think they are being paid enough for their services. If they weren't they wouldn't be in the business. But the thing that doesn't look right to me—the thing that would make it appear that the franchise is not what it should be—is the fact that it was steam-rollered through council, and that the company showed an unwillingness for the question to be submitted to a vote by the people."

ing this matter up again will only divide the people again and work to the detriment of the interests of the city."
F. L. Thompson: "I confess I haven't kept up with the discussion of the franchise matter and, therefore, am not in a position to express an opinion on the matter."
T. Frank Watkins: "In my opinion the attempt or effort to renounce the franchise and water and lighting contracts is both an error of business judgment and of business morals. Of business judgment because the contract is a splendidly advantageous one to the city and the people. No town our size, supplied by a private corporation has as good a one, and it guarantees us the privilege of municipal ownership of water and light facilities or both if we ever want to exercise it. Of business morals, because we held out the contract as a legal and binding one, accepted and have enjoyed as a town and individually the lower rates it enjoined on the company, and let the company spend its money on improvements and sell bonds on the strength of their contracts. And now it is proposed voluntarily to repudiate our signed and sealed covenants."

John A. Austin: "I have been very busy for the past several days moving my place of business to a new stand, and haven't had time to read what has been said about the franchise matter. Therefore, I couldn't express an opinion on the matter."
R. W. Tribble: "I think enough has been said already."
Prominent Banker: "I don't care to discuss the matter publicly, but I have talked to members of council about the question and have told them that I thought they had made a great mistake in going into this franchise matter again. I believe the city ought to stick to the contract which it has made, regardless of whether we think it is good or bad. Were the matter put to a vote, I would vote to let the thing remain as it is."

T. Loyd Cely: "I haven't had time to keep up with the discussion of the franchise matter and, therefore, don't feel that I am in a position to discuss it. But personally I am satisfied with what I am getting."
J. R. Vandiver: "I do not care to make any comment on the question."
A Leading Clothier: "I don't care to make a statement for publication concerning the franchise matter. I would like mightily well to see the matter drop, and the city get together on something for the betterment of the community."

J. P. Catlett: "If that franchise-contract was signed by the proper authorities, I believe that we ought to stick to the trade. If there is any kicking to be done, let it come from those who are paying for the service. I am taking the service, and I have no kick; counting. I know that I am getting mighty good service, and at a reasonable price, and I am willing to pay for it. We ought not to expect good service unless we are willing to pay for it."
A Public Office Holder: "I don't care to make a statement for publication concerning the matter, but I am in full sympathy with the stand which The Intelligencer is taking on the question."

Rufus Fant: "I believe the franchise-contract was entered into by the old council and the Southern Public Utilities Company in good faith, and I believe the present council ought to stick to the trade. The white way is the greatest advertisement the city of Anderson has ever had, a verdict which has been pronounced by scores of tourists. This town was pretty dead before the Dukes became interested in it. We had better be mighty careful or we will kill the goose that laid the golden egg."
G. H. Balles: "I don't care to discuss the matter, as I am not familiar with the issues."

Joe Bell: "I have nothing to say as to the validity of the franchise-contract. I can say, however, that I am getting water and lights cheaper than I have ever gotten them before."
W. W. Webb: "I confess I ought to be in a position to discuss the matter, but I haven't had the time to familiarize myself with the proposition. Every citizen ought to take an interest in the matters that affect the city, and ought to be ready and willing to express his opinion concerning them. So I will have to ask to be excused this time."
Prominent Shoe Dealer: "I haven't anything to say for publication regarding the matter. My private opinion is that the franchise matter had better be left alone. It is an uphill business to fight a corporation. I trust the matter will be let alone and I hope that no attempt will be made to refer it to a vote of the people."

A Leading Attorney: "Were the franchise-contract matter put to a vote of the people, I would vote to remain the franchise now in force. I agree with The Intelligencer in the stand they have taken in the question, but thinking they are most too drastic in championing the cause of a corporation."
One of Anderson's Oldest and Best Known Citizens: "People have howled about the council giving the Southern Public Utilities Company a 40-year franchise. I do not consider it

Famous American Naval Author Dies Suddenly

Admiral A. T. Mahan, who won many years has had an international reputation as a writer on naval subjects, died suddenly in Washington. His work as naval commander did not bring him much prominence, but his book "The Influence of Sea Power Upon History" made him known over the world. The admiral was born Sept. 27, 1848, at West Point, where his father was a professor and an expert on mathematical engineering subjects. He was appointed to Annapolis from New York in 1866, and he graduated in time to serve through the Civil War.

His books on naval strategy, history and his opinions on international politics made him influential throughout Europe, and his criticisms of the British naval policy were closely studied by the admiralty.

any such thing. It is only a five-year franchise, as the city is given the option of taking it over at the expiration of every five years. I don't care to be quoted in the matter, but you can depend upon me to take care of the city's interests should it come to a vote on the question."

Archie L. Todd: "I think the city got a mighty good thing in the franchise-contract, and I think we had better stick to it. It is a far better franchise than a great many other cities have, and I don't see how Anderson could better herself."
Real Estate Magnate: "I am thoroughly satisfied with the franchise and believe that the city has got a bargain. I think the matter ought to stand where it is, as the contract was entered into in good faith by the proper authorities. I believe that the rank and file of the people prefer that the matter stand as it is now."

A Well Known Mechanic: "I am not saying anything about the legality of the franchise-contract. But this thing was entered into by the proper representatives of the people and by a majority of them, and for that reason, if for no other, I believe that it ought to be let alone. I am tired of the squabble and I want to see the people get together and pull for the good of the city."
Frank Farmer: "I am very much obliged for the invitation to express an opinion on the matter, but prefer not to say anything."

J. L. Sheard: "I don't care to make a statement for publication just at this time."
M. M. Mattison: "I was very much in favor of granting the franchise because I believed it was a good one, and would be greatly beneficial to the city. I have no hesitancy in saying that I believe this contract should be allowed to stand, and that it would be a great mistake for the city to repudiate it."

"Uncle Dave" Taylor, Sandy Springs: "I feel that the opposition to the splendid franchise you people have is from those who have never travelled and do not know what other cities have. They should not try to get out of a contract that was drawn up by their representatives."
Well Known Broker: "The article in this morning's Intelligencer by Mr. John K. Hood was the best thing of the kind that has been published yet. That article will do an immense amount of good."

E. E. Elmore: "Several persons have been in my store today and some of them who were violently opposed to the franchise said that after reading Mr. Hood's article in this morning's Intelligencer they had changed their minds about the matter."

Uncle Dave's Letter

What about the boy? What are you going to do for the boy who is fast growing into a man?
I am going to get all the work out of him I can until he is of age, then I'm going to turn him loose to hustle for himself as I had to do.
This is what hundreds of farmers all over the land are saying in America to the above question. It is all a mistake. The boy who takes after his father wants to have a profit for his labor. If he sees no reward but something to eat and wear and a place to sleep, he is very likely to turn his steps toward the city before he is of age. He will think a job in the city worth more to him than a mere living on the farm. There are many boys that leave the farm early in life, not because they do not like the farm, nor their folks, but for the simple reason that they have no interest in stock or crops or anything on the farm. Now a boy doesn't want to work hard day after day and see no returns for his labor, and parents are unwise who make slaves out of their boys. The boys will turn away from them and the farm in disgust long before they have reached the years of manhood. Where it is possible the farm boy should be given a chance to do something for himself. The boy, like the man, revolts at the idea of being wholly a slave to another, even though that person be a kind father. The boy should have something to start with, and he should be allowed to make it before he is grown. Put twenty thousand dollars in his hands when he is grown, and if he has had nothing to do with the making of it for himself, he will not appreciate it—for the reason he will not have judgment enough to handle it.

He is strong who can knock a man down; he is stronger who can lift a man up.
That word "Yes." "Yes." is a simple word spelled with three letters. It has caused more happiness and more unhappiness than any other word in the language. It has lost more money for easy lenders than all the holes in all the pockets in the world. It has started more dipsomania on their career than all the strong liquor on earth. It has procured kisses and provoked blows. It has delighted candidates and elected scoundrels. It has been used in more lies than any other expression. It is not meant half the time it is said.
Will it continue to make such a record? Yes.
Young lady in Anderson—Uncle Dave, what makes the colors in butterflies?
The colors in butterflies are influenced by the temperature of the air in which they live.

Grief can take care of itself, but to get the full value of joy, you must have somebody to divide it with.
What is an Elk?
A man with a boy's heart.
Elks Home.
The rich are welcome, so they come simply;
The poor are welcome, for life's struggles
Have taught them friendliness;
Youth is welcome, for it brings the joy
We all would learn;
Age is welcome, for it teaches us tenderness.

The season is at hand when we can best appreciate the value and, alas, the absence, of good roads in our section.
No matter how broad or liber our attitude toward woman may be—no matter how many privileges may be extended to her—no matter how many opportunities for mental or physical improvement may be hers, we must always recognize that for this, above all things, she is worthy of the respect, the admiration and the deference of all mankind.
I kind of like the weather when the frost is in the air,
An' leaves are turnin' russet, red an' gold,
An' I kind of like to wander through the woods as when a boy
An' forget I'm getting bald and growing old.
—UNCLE DAVE.

Some farmers claim to have a great deal of bad luck. They say that fate is against them, and when some calamity befalls their stock or they fail to raise a good crop they say it was all the result of their "bad luck." I say in the majority of instances it is the consequence of bad management.

He who kills time by loitering on the streets kills his better nature just as surely. And what injures the moral part of man is also harmful to the physical part. He not in haste to leave the farm and "go to town to live in idleness," is absolutely necessary to us, not only to preserve health, but to preserve integrity.

Men may fool the world by living a lie, but they will never fool God.
Most banqueters are not so much interested in "we have with us tonight," as they are in "we have within us."
Nevertheless, no matter how happy a woman is married, she always hopes that her daughter will grab a much better one.
